HELPFUL INFORMATION

If you are the victim of an offender committed as a
Sexually Violent Person

VICTIM NOTIFICATION

State Of Wisconsin

Elder Services

YOUR RIGHTS...

As the victim of a crime, you should be aware of the legal process related to offenders civilly committed as a "Sexually Violent Person" and your options for victim notification.

Persons who commit specific sexual offenses and are convicted, found delinquent as juveniles, or committed as not guilty by reason of mental disease or defect and then sent to a correctional facility or mental health institution are subject to this legal process. As the offender approaches discharge from a correctional facility or mental health institution, they are subject to review and examination by psychologists from the Department of Corrections or the Department of Health and Family Services.

If an offender meets specific criteria, a court can civilly commit the person to a secure treatment facility administered by the Department of Health and Family Services. A commitment under this law is for an indefinite period of time. First, the offender is admitted to the Wisconsin Resource Center in Oshkosh, Wisconsin for assessment and orientation. When the offender completes this phase and consents to treatment, the offender will be transferred to the Sand Ridge Secure Treatment Center in Mauston, Wisconsin for treatment. Some offenders who do not agree to participate in treatment will remain at WRC.

Offenders who are committed under this law are allowed to petition the court for supervised release in the community. Only the court can grant supervised release. Supervised Release is similar to being on probation or parole supervision.

Department of Health and Family Services staff develop a court-approved supervised release plan including supervision and continued treatment services. A State of Wisconsin Probation and Parole Agent is assigned to the case. Rules, limits and expectations are imposed on an offender granted supervised release. Violations of conditions of release or rules of supervision may result in the court revoking the supervised release. As a consequence, the offender may return to a secure treatment facility.

The law also allows the person to petition for discharge. Individuals are released from the secure treatment facility if the court determines they no longer meet the legal definition of a sexually violent person and terminates their commitment.

Any person committed under this law is required to comply with sex offender registration in Wisconsin for life. Any person committed under this law who is released into the community, whether on supervised release or discharged is subject to community notification. The Department of Health and Family Services notifies local law enforcement of the person's release for community notification purposes.

The law requires notification of the victim at least seven days prior to an offender's release from a secure treatment facility. This is the only information the Department can provide to you about this individual under Wisconsin law governing patient confidentiality.
